Stay tuned for more details, which we will share as they become available.

CMS “Caregiver Support” Webinar: Successful aging programs include services in the continuum, such as adult day care, that promote caregiver supports. Today’s CMS webinar highlighted this LTSS focus area with education on how to better understand practices that ensure caregivers’ needs are met. The impacts of caregiver burnout, compassion fatigue, and grief were explored, along with the need for caregivers to find balance with self-care, social connectedness and community supports. More information from CMS on this and related topics is offered at here.

New Data on Heat-Related ED Visits. As heat waves are becoming more frequent and severe across the country, the Agency for Health Research and Quality (AHRQ) released a first-time data analysis looking at emergency department (ED) visits due to extreme heat exposure in 2019. States with the highest population rates of ED visits with heat exposure include Mississippi, Arkansas, South Carolina, Kentucky and Missouri. The states with the lowest rates were Alaska, Wyoming, New York, Montana and Colorado. Rural counties were more likely to have higher rates of ED visits related to heat exposure—a finding that challenges assumptions that health problems related to extreme heat are most acute in urban areas.

Advance Care Planning, For Gun Ownership. Colorado researchers published a tool to help gun owners and family members plan ahead for safe firearm use and transfers in the event of disability or death. The Firearm Life Plan kit has four parts that stress personal responsibility, safety, and the importance of being prepared. First, the kit lists of warning signs (physical, cognitive, behavioral, and emotional) that might cause a gun owner to use a gun inappropriately. Second, the guide features conversation prompts for family members and friends who might be concerned about an older gun owner and for older adults who recognize the value of planning ahead. The third part is most practical and calls for people to create an inventory of their firearms, where they’re stored, who should get the firearms when the owner dies or is willing to relinquish them, and when transfers should occur. The final component of the guide is a “legacy” section that asks gun owners to share memories and stories about their firearms and what they’ve meant to them.

A fall surge is likely. Interview with Ghinwa Dumyati, infectious disease physician and professor of medicine. A fall surge is likely and protections like vaccines, boosters, masking, distancing, and improving ventilation are additive. COVID therapeutic drugs should be increasingly available over the next weeks, but Paxlovid interacts with more than 100 medications, so that needs to be considered in determining what will work best for the individual. Dr. Dumyati, of the University of Rochester Medical Center joined the Coronavirus Update Call today and shared her insights which are summarized in this article. One question came up after Dr. Dumyati left: if a person was fully vaccinated with two doses of Moderna or Pfizer or one dose of J&J in early 2021, do those vaccines offer much protection? Her answer was that compared to the unvaccinated person, there is some protection. Hospitalization, however, if the person does contract COVID, is lower in those who are boosted. See this CDC explanation about rates of COVID-19 hospitalizations by vaccine status.

COVID-19 Was Third Leading Cause of Death in the United States: CDC released two reports on CDC's National Vital Statistics System to look at death rates in the United States and find that differences in death rates still remain between certain racial and ethnic minority groups. The first report provides an overview of provisional U.S. mortality data for 2021, including a comparison of death rates for all causes of death and for deaths involving COVID-19. The study found that the overall age-adjusted death rate increased by almost 1% in 2021 from 2020. Overall death rates were highest among non-Hispanic American Indian/Alaskan Native and non-Hispanic Black or African American people. For the second year, COVID-19 was the third leading cause of death after heart disease and cancer.

Advocacy Alerts and Hill News:

Congressional Update. The House and Senate are back for what's looking like a busy May legislative session. We expect continued focus on Ukraine aid in the coming weeks. However, there are other items on the agenda that LeadingAge is tracking very closely, including COVID relief. When lawmakers recessed two weeks ago, the Senate had failed to reach an agreement to pass a $10 billion COVID funding package for testing, treatments, and vaccines. The stalemate was due to a disagreement over a border-enforcement policy, known as Title 42, named after a section of the U.S. Code that prevents immigrants from seeking asylum. Another concern was the final funding amount of the $10 billion, which began as a request from of $22.5 billion from the Administration. As members of Congress return to Washington to engage in further discussions on COVID relief, we will be there to continue fighting for additional assistance, including additional funding for provider relief, which was not included in the last proposal.

Additional items of importance are government funding and economic relief. President Biden sent the Administration's Fiscal Year 2023 budget request to Congress on March 28. Of course, Congress will identify its own priorities, as it holds the Constitutional power of the purse. In fact, House and Senate Appropriations Committee leaders will meet this week to discuss top-line funding for Fiscal Year 2023, and hearings are already underway to exam the Administration's budget request, which we are watching closely. Meanwhile, the House and Senate are considering how to move forward on an economic package. Unfortunately, the Build Back Better Act hit a wall, and ongoing discussions have been a challenge, but the fight isn't over. A separate innovation package was developed to invest in scientific research, funding the development of new technologies, and bolstering domestic production of semiconductors. Both chambers have passed their respective versions with significant differences between the two bills, and members of Congress are now beginning the process of reconciling the two versions to produce a final bill for passage. Given that this bill might be one of the larger measures that Congress passes, it might also provide an opportunity to include additional priorities. So please stay tuned for additional updates down the road.

Senators' Letter to DOT Asks to Prioritize Seniors and People with Disabilities. On April 22, Senators Bob Casey (D-PA), Ed Markey (D-MA), Chris Van Hollen (D-MD), Richard Blumenthal (D-CT) and Tammy Duckworth (D-IL) sent a letter urging U.S. Department of Transportation Secretary Pete Buttigieg to ensure that these investments make travel accessible for older adults and people with disabilities. The letter emphasizing that all new start construction projects under the Infrastructure Investment and Jobs Act (IIJA) investments, must be compliant with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA)—the landmark civil rights law prohibiting discrimination against people with disabilities in all areas of public life—and the Rehabilitation Act, which prohibits discrimination against people with disabilities in programs conducted by federal agencies or receiving federal funding.

New Report Critical of Telehealth Expansion Costs. The Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget, a nonpartisan think tank, has released a new report argues against the Congressional Budget Office's recent estimate that the five-month telehealth extension signed into law last month will cost $663 million. They argue permanent expansion could cost $25 billion over a decade. The think tank further argues that expanding telehealth should only occur under value-based payment approaches where opportunities of telehealth could expand without increasing federal budgets. The report admits telehealth is here to stay but that the authorities for should not be made permanent allowing policymakers to review research on telehealth's impact on health care costs.
