New CAHPS Survey Guidance Released. In each chapter of the guidance document, a new section has been added called “New for QAG V11.0” which outlines any changes made in the survey protocol.

LeadingAge Calls on White House to Elevate Older Adults in Extreme Heat Response. In early July, President Biden called for multiple agencies to coalesce at an Extreme Weather Summit. Following the summit in mid-September, the White House announced an extreme heat call to action. The call to action was coupled with a draft Extreme Heat Community Checklist to help municipalities, towns, and tribal organizations prepare for and respond to extreme heat events. LeadingAge submitted comments urging the administration to take better account of the needs of older adults and their vulnerabilities to heat. We urged partnerships between communities and the providers serving older adults and more thoughtful inclusion of older adults and their unique needs and abilities. Our comments suggested broader communications techniques than internet and social media content while prioritizing support that meets older adults where they live. Though the checklist fell short of thought provoking questions that could sway a local government to consider significant investment in making communities more resilient to extreme heat like grants for energy assistance or building retrofit projects, the draft provides communities a starting point for engaging with the public about the risks of extreme heat. You can read our comments here.

OIG Updates Recommendations Tracker with Post Acute and MA Recommendations. The Health & Human Services (HHS) Office of Inspector General (OIG) updated its Recommendations Tracker with the Top Unimplemented Recommendations of 2024 on October 17. Of thirty-three unimplemented recommendations, four relate directly to nursing homes including two recommendations related to psychotropic drug use, one recommendation related to infection control, and one recommendation related to facility-initiated discharges. OIG highlighted one recommendation for home health to expand the inpatient rehab facility transfer payment policy to apply to early home health discharge as well as a recommendation for Medicare Advantage plans to submit ordering provider NPI on encounter records for home health. As part of the recommendations, OIG also flagged two unimplemented recommendations to first modify payments for hospice care in nursing facilities and ensure Medicare is not paying for drugs for hospice patients twice. Finally, OIG included an unimplemented recommendation to assess the risks and benefits of Medicare Advantage chart reviews not linked to service records and improving oversight of Medicaid Managed Care plans. Updates on all recommendations are expected in the coming months.

Update on IV Solution Supply Shortages. Health & Human Services (HHS) Secretary Xavier Becerra issued a letter to healthcare providers on October 9 and a press statement on October 11 outlining the Department's understanding of and actions to address intravenous (IV) solution supply shortages related to Hurricane Helene. Secretary Becerra stated that HHS has moved and protected product from the impacted manufacturing facility in North Carolina, worked with the Food & Drug Administration (FDA) and other agencies to increase supply, and is working to restore operations at the impacted North Carolina facility. The Administration for Strategic Preparedness and Response (ASPR) released an updated tip sheet on October 9 for managing IV fluid supplies during shortage.

New Research Shows Wage Gap for Direct Care Workers. On October 16, PHI released Competitive Disadvantage: Direct Care Wages Are Lagging Behind—2024 Update, an analysis of wage disparities between direct care workers and comparable occupations throughout the United States. The analysis also highlights trends in the wage gap between direct care workers and comparable occupations (e.g., housekeepers, janitors, customer service representatives, retail salespersons, and food preparation workers) from 2014 to 2023. The report found that in all 50 states and the District of Columbia, direct care workers earned a lower median wage than comparable occupations in other industries. As of 2023, the latest available data, the hourly wage gap varied from -$0.46 in Rhode Island to -$5.56 in Texas. In 39 states, the gap was at least -$2.00 per hour, with 19 of those states reporting a difference of over -$3.00 per hour. Over the past decade, direct care worker median wages remained lower than median wages for similar occupations despite narrowing in 32 states. Despite some advances, the wage gap has widened 17 states. "An array of strategies is needed to improve job quality, strengthen and stabilize the direct care workforce, and ensure access to services for all those who need them," the report says, reflecting LeadingAge's support for an array of solutions to address the needs of the aging services workforce.

Congress Concerned about DEA's Approach to Telehealth Prescribing. On October 11, a group of lawmakers from the House of Representatives pressed the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) over reports that it plans to limit flexibilities allowing health care providers to prescribe controlled substances via telemedicine. In a letter sent to DEA Administrator Anne Milgram, a group of lawmakers led by Representatives Doris Matsui (D-CA) and Earl L. "Buddy" Carter (R-GA) took issue with the agency's work to create a special registration process for telemedicine prescribing. During the COVID-19 pandemic, the DEA allowed for most controlled medicines, like ADHD medications, to be prescribed via telemedicine rather than in person. As LeadingAge previously reported, DEA has extended the flexibilities twice, and appears poised to extend those flexibilities a third time. The DEA has not said how long the third extension will be. The current flexibilities are set to expire on December 31, 2024. In the letter, lawmakers expressed concern about reports that the DEA ultimately has plans to limit telemedicine prescribing and the misalignment with legislative intent of the registration program as well as the potential to hurt patient access to necessary drugs. Furthermore, the letter voices concern regarding time running out for DEA to finalize the rule before it reverts back to pre-COVID prescribing requirements on December 31, 2024.

DEA Submits Final Rule to Extend Telemedicine Flexibilities for a Third Time. The Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA) submitted a final rule to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for a third temporary extension of the COVID telemedicine flexibilities for prescription of controlled substances. As LeadingAge previously reported, the DEA is working to update COVID waivers that allowed prescribers to write prescriptions for controlled substances without an in-person meeting. Those current flexibilities are set to expire December 31, 2024. The current proposed rule to update the flexibilities, which was redrafted after considerable pushback in 2023, has yet again hit major hurdles with advocates from across the care continuum. A former DEA staff member shared that the proposal, which has been with OMB since June 2024 would be even more restrictive than the original proposal. LeadingAge does not expect the new proposed rule to be published before the election, but the temporary extension will allow more time for advocates, prescribers, and patients to review and comment on the proposal without losing access to essential medications.
